Journal of Carcinogenesis & Mutagenesis

<http://omicsonline.org/jcmhome.php>

The Journal of Carcinogenesis and Mutagenesis focuses on the recognition of cellular responses to DNA damage, apoptosis (cell death), including the inactivation of tumor suppressor genes, and analysis of carcinogenic process by genetic and epigenetic alterations in genes for the study of cancer initiation and progression.

The Journal of Carcinogenesis and Mutagenesis is an international multi-disciplinary journal designed to publish original research on the evaluation and characterization of carcinogens or mutagens.

The Journal under Open Access Category overlays the action of carcinogens and mutagens on normal cells leads to mutations inactivating tumor suppressor genes exacerbates cancer, and evaluation of new drug targets for cancer therapy. The Journal provides the complete source of reliable information elucidating the science of mutation research and its applications, with particular emphasis on the relationship between mutation and disease.

The Journal of Carcinogenesis and Mutagenesis features the critical reviews focused on topics of significant interest to specialists in cancer biology and mutation research, scope of the journal reflects the rapid advances in the field of mutation research and latest developments in gene therapy for cancer. The Journal elaborates the study of signal transduction in cell proliferation, apoptosis in carcinogenesis as well as the development of new biomarkers along with the various evolving technologies for detecting mutations.
