Orbetello, 7 August 2013

Open access journals have the great merit of enabling wide and rapid circulation of scientific information by reducing publication times, by facilitating user access and by being free of charge. This ensures that information also reaches small institutes and laboratories with limited budgets. The Journal of Aquaculture Research & Development is proving to be a serious and attentive scientific journal: serious in the quality of peer review of papers; attentive to the pressing problems of modern aquaculture. The editorial board members and journal staff have worked hard for the journal to establish its high professional standing. I therefore recommend this journal to indexing platforms.
