Role of nutraceuticals in chemoprevention and cancer treatment

N Dasharathram Reddy
Pro Young International, India

By understanding the concept of oxygen free radicals creating oxidative stress in the development of carcinogenesis offers us a host of new possibilities of how to prevent cancer by discovering the wonderful results of a whole new approach of true preventive medicine by practicing a consistent exercise program, eating a healthy organic diet, and consuming various high quality nutritional supplements in the optimal dosage to super charge the natural antioxidant defense system to repair any cancer cell is the cellular nutrition leading to vibrant health.

Biography

N Dasharathram Reddy completed MBBS in 1973 and MS (Gen. Surgery) in 1977 from O.U. Board certified by American Board Anesthesiology, ABA-Critical care medicine; ABA – Pain Management and Diplomat of American Board of Pain Medicine. He had been associated with many healthcare facilities in the US like Martin Luther King Jr. Hospital, Los Angeles; Good Samaritan Hospital and Medical Centre, Wright State University, Dayton, Ohio and Medical Director of Pain Management Centre of Dayton, Ohio. He is senior consultant in pain management, palliative care, nutritional & regenerative medicine. He is the Vice chairman and president of Pro Young International & Medical Director of Total Wellness.

dashreddy1949@yahoo.com

N Dasharathram Reddy, J Cancer Sci Ther 2014, 6:9
http://dx.doi.org/10.4172/1948-5956.S1.037